Ethics

This workshop will describe commonly encountered ethical dilemmas, as well as descriptions of ethical principles and guidelines for applying them to everyday situations. This program provides 3 contact hours (3 CEUs) of continuing education approved by OSPA (OSPA credit accepted by OPA). Participants desiring credit must sign attendance sheets and complete a written program evaluation.

Kathy McNamara, Ph.D., is a professor at Cleveland State University and the Chair of the Ethical and Professional Practices Committee for the National Association of School Psychologists.

Thursday, November 3 Presentation:

Assessment to Intervention Within an RTI Framework

9:15 – 12:00 Matthew Burns and Amanda VanDerHeyden

This session will discuss the foundation for RTI, the unified model that can be implemented in schools and problem-solving as the framework for RTI.

1:30 – 4:30 Amanda VanDerHeyden
Assessment and Intervention Within Tier 1

This session will address identifying and remediating class-wide problems in reading and math.

Friday, November 4 Presentation:

8:00 – 11:00 Amanda VanDerHeyden
Assessment and Intervention Within Tier 2

This session will discuss standardized small-group interventions to address categories of reading and math problems, as well as present information regarding assessments used to analyze problems within Tier 2, interventions to use, and models to deliver the interventions.

12:45 – 3:45 Matthew Burns
Assessment and Intervention Within Tier 3

This session will address information about analyzing individual problems and using the data to determine appropriate interventions for individual students. Specific interventions that can be used for reading and math difficulties will be presented.

About The Presenters:

Matthew Burns, Ph.D. is a Professor of Educational Psychology, Coordinator of the School Psychology program, and Co-director of the Minnesota Center for Reading Research at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Burns has published over 100 articles and book chapters in national publications, and has co-authored or co-edited several books. He is also the Editor of School Psychology Review and past Editor of Assessment for Effective Intervention. He has collaborated with numerous schools across the country to implement RTI frameworks, and worked as a school psychologist and special education administrator before becoming a university professor.

Amanda M. VanDerHeyden has worked as a researcher, consultant, and national trainer in a number of school districts and published more than 60 scholarly articles and book chapters related to RTI. In 2006, she was named to a National Center for Learning Disabilities advisory panel to provide guidance related to RTI. She is associate editor of School Psychology Review, serves on the editorial boards of several journals including School Psychology Quarterly and Journal of Early Intervention, is author of Essentials of Response to Intervention (with Dr. Matthew Burns), and Keeping RTI On Track: How To Identify, Repair, and Prevent Mistakes That Detail Implementation RTI (with Dr. David Tilly) and is co-editor of the Handbook of Response to Intervention.
