The Psychiatric Intake Response Center (PIRC), located at Akron Children's Hospital, is a special mental health referral service linking families to a wide range of behavioral health services for children and teens in Summit County and beyond. PIRC is staffed by licensed independent social workers and licensed professional clinical counselors specially trained to assess a child's mental, emotional and behavioral health care needs. Families seeking answers or services for their child will receive a preliminary screening over the phone to determine the appropriate type and level of care needed. Children and teens considered high risk may be referred for a face-to-face assessment in the Akron Children's Emergency Department.
